Rotem Singer, a 23-year-old Israeli tourist, was accused of starting a forest fire. His arrest triggered an avalanche of anti-Semitic sentiments.

On December 27, 2011, a massive forest fire raged through the Torres del Paine National Park in Patagonia, Chile and destroyed an area of about 125 sq km. Hundreds of military personnel and fire fighters were deployed at the scene to fight the blaze and managed to bring the fire under control on January 2, 2012. The area is a popular tourist destination due to its striking mountain peaks, and thousands of tourists visit the region at this time of year.
